Blaschke products are an important class of functions in analytic function theory in the unit disk, both because of their involvement in factorization theorems and their utility for the construction of examples. Blaschke products may be used to give a product representation of important classes of holomorphic functions in the unit disc. Thus, a proof was given for the following theorem of Blaschke: A sequence of points in the disc is the sequence of all zeros of some bounded holomorphic function, in if and only if the series is convergent.
